Upgrade to satellite navigation and it will be music to your ears

The new Mercedes-Benz Universal Media Interface (UMI) is the ideal solution for anyone who likes the sound of satellite navigation and music from multiple sources.

Beautifully integrated to operate through the central controller, via the steering wheel for added safety – the UMI truly is the most cost-effective way of getting more from your existing Audio 20 system.

Navigation made easy

The satellite navigation function gives you navigation throughout Europe and full postcode functionality within the UK, through a clear 3D display with spoken instructions. There's also a Traffic Message Channel to warn of jams and suggest a detour.

Clear menus and the address input are shown on your Audio 20 CD display. And on the instrument cluster display, your chosen route and the distance to your next turning point is highlighted through arrow navigation.

A full version of the navigation software is included and updates are obtainable simply by uploading the latest map information from a USB stick.

If you have music stored as MP3 files on your mobile phone, you don't need wires to play it back – simply make use of their Bluetooth® connectivity and play your music through the UMI.

For example, you can connect your Nokia N95, Sony Ericsson W880i Walkman phone or Motorola Motorazr V6 to the system even if you leave your phone in your jacket, briefcase, or even the boot of your Mercedes-Benz.

Play all your old favorites

Audio obsolescence isn't a problem. Featuring an aux-in port, the UMI enables you to connect your old-style cassette Walkman or other audio source, so you can play them back and relive your favorite musical memories.

All the connections, none of the fuss

The UMI is conveniently stored in the glovebox and integrated into the Audio 20 CD system. If you have an MP3 player, USB stick, iPod or iPhone you can simply connect to the USB socket in the glovebox. Then you can manage the audio files easily and safely, via the Audio 20 CD menus. Alternatively, with your iPod, iPod Nano, iPod Mini and iPhone you can use the familiar iPod menu structure to navigate your music files.

And, of course, your valuable hardware is hidden from prying eyes, safely stored in the glovebox.
